RUSSIAN CRISIS DRAWING NEAR

Parliament is Dissolved By Royal Ukase.

Three Premiers in Twenty-four Hours Advise the Czar—
Trouble is Fanned.

TROOPS PATROLLING STREETS.

St. Petersburg, July 23.—With pitiful but momentous orders which were promulgated at 3 o'clock Saturday morning Emperor Nicholas, by a stroke of the pen, set Russia back to where she stood two years ago, in the full grip of the autocracy and irresponsible government.

The texts of the two ukases, both of which are addressed in the stereotyped form to the ruling senate, are as follows:

"According to paragraph 105 of the fundamental law, we order the imperial parliament dissolved and fix the time for the convocation of the newly elected parliament for March 5, 1907. Regarding the time for the next sessions to the imperial parliament, we will later issue special indications. The ruling senate will not fail to take proper measures to place this into effect."

NICHOLAS.

"Peterhof, July 21."

The text of the ukase follows:

"In consideration of a report of the council of ministers presented to us regarding the necessity in the future of the preservation of order and public safety in the city and province of St. Petersburg, we consider it necessary to declare in the above city and province, instead of the state of reinforced security which now prevails there, a state of extraordinary security. The perfect of the city and the governor of the province are interested with the rights thereto appertaining. The ruling senate will not fail to take proper measures to place this into effect."

NICHOLAS.

"Peterhof, July 21."

The Russian parliament, which has been dissolved by imperial ukase, was constituted May 10, 1906. The reorganized council of the empire was convened in the hall of nobles at the winter palace.

A striking feature of the lower house was the multiplicity of races represented, there being great Russians, Little Russians, white Russians, Poles, Lithuanians, Letts, Germans, Tatars, Bashkirs, Kirghis, Circassians, Moravians, Yotaks, Jews, Bulgarians, Chuvash, Roumanians, Caluks, Georgians, Armenians, Ossetians and Burzats in attendance.

On the third day of the sitting in the lower house the first signs of antagonism to the government were shown, when the demand for amnesty and the Polish campaign for autonomy began; and when, on May 18, the reply of the lower house in the address from the throne was adopted, opinions became general that this would cause conflict with the crown because of its radical demands. During the entire session the lower house has been at bitter odds with the government, and has demanded its resignation and the formation of a cabinet of members of the majority.

The lower house, presided over by Prof. S. A. Mouroussoff, had a membership of 457.

Military Despotism.

St. Petersburg, July 23.—The work of gathering in the revolutionary agitators began immediately after the ukase placing St. Petersburg in a "state of extraordinary security" was promulgated, and hundreds of arrests were made before day light.

The powers conferred upon M. Von Der Lantzi, prefect of police, and M. Zinovief, governor of the province, are little short of those of petty dictators. Searches and arrests can be made without process of law, newspapers forced to suspend publication, and persons reported by the administrative order held without trial. Public and private meetings are forbidden. Those arrested may, if desired, be tried by military court and summarily executed. The only real difference between "extraordinary security" and full martial law is that the power is exercised by the so-called civil instead of military authorities.

To Meet in Finland.

Some time ago when dissolution seemed imminent the various groups of the duma virtually agreed to follow the example of their French counterparts if driven out of the Lauride palace wherever and whenever circumstances dictated, until the constitution is firmly established. After a hurried secret conference this morning it was decided on account of the possibility of the meeting being broken up and the members arrested that they go immediately to Finland and decide upon the future course to be pursued, and small groups left this afternoon and evening by train. It seems probable that Finland in the future Russian history will become synonymous with the "tennis court" of the French revolution. Even Count Hayden is understood to have departed.

Situation in Russia.

St. Petersburg, July 23.—The attention of the world probably will be centered this week on the political situation at St. Petersburg which appears to have reached a crisis. The dissolution of parliament by an imperial ukase, resulting in Goremykin surrendering the premiership, and the succession of Stolypin, minister of the interior to the post, the massing of troops in the capital city and the general belief that a dictatorship is inevitable, all make it appear that armed conflict is impending. The object of the address to the country to be issued by the socialists and the group of toll will be awaited with interest.

The temper in which the masses of the Russian people will take the summary dismissal of the nation's elected representatives will be one of the most important developments of the week. The views of those who support the autocracy are shown in an interview given to an Associated Press correspondent Saturday by a cabinet minister who said: "The government must hold out until a stable regime is assured or anarchy will supervene."

Streets Are Quiet.

St. Petersburg, July 23.—During the early morning hours the streets were quiet. Notwithstanding the fears that disorders may begin at almost any hour the city presented its normal appearance, except for numerous military patrols in the streets. There are now 50,000 troops in the city, besides strong artillery forces. They are counted upon to prevent disorders. Patrols of cavalry were kept on the move through the thoroughfares all night in a precautionary motive.

Russian Bonds Drooping.

Paris, July 23.—Russian bonds have dropped six points on the bourse and are still falling as the result of the crisis in the Russian situation.

Meet in Finland.

From Viitor, Finland, July 23.—Members of the duma, who came here for the purpose of continuing the session, following the dissolution of parliament by the czar's ukase, held a sitting which lasted all night, in which the situation was canvassed thoroughly.

HORSE TRADERS

MUST TAKE OUT LICENSES OR LEAVE CITY.

Inspector Says They Cannot Operate
Around Sides Without Paying —Two Submits.

Horse trading around the city scales will have to be conducted under the sanction of the city backed up by "a bought and paid for license" or discontinued.

This is the ultimatum of license Inspector Lehnard, and the break in the ranks of the horse traders, who at first displayed an inclination to hold out, came today when L. E. Spann, of Tyler, and Jesse McIntire paid their license fees and were dismissed in ordinance court. Three licenses have so far been taken out and one warrant is outstanding. Inspector Lehnard says that if by next Saturday a dozen more licenses are not taken out he will secure more warrants.

His first idea was to drive them out of the city and he threatened to swear out warrants. Some of the traders challenged his authority and then he began a crusade in earnest. The traders said they would employ lawyers and fight the case, but decided to submit.

ASLEEP ON TRACK, HEARD NO ENGINE

Truck Walker is Hurled Distance of Twenty Feet.

Picked Up Unconscious and Brought to Paducah—He Will Recover From Injury.

THE HEAT MADE HUFF DROWSY.

Fatigued from heat and falling asleep on the track, James Huff, 33 years old, a truck walker, was struck by an Illinois Central freight train Sunday morning near Grand Rivers and seriously injured before the engineer saw him and it was too late to stop. He will recover.

Huff is married and gives his residence at Grand Rivers, Ky. He is employed on the section of the Illinois Central between Grand Rivers and Kuttawa. He became hot and fatigued and sat down on the tracks. There he went to sleep.

The pilot struck his side and he was pitched a distance of 20 feet, clear off the right of way. He lay motionless until the crew picked him up. When brought to the I. C. hospital here and an examination made it was found that his skull was fractured and his scalp lacerated. His hips, shoulders and back were bruised and sprained but none of the bones in his limbs was broken.

This morning he is resting easy and the concussion he suffered yesterday has nearly all disappeared.

VEHICLE SUPPLIES

May Be Manufactured in This City By Men From Cairo.

H. L. Doherty, of Cairo, is in the city looking for a location for a plant to manufacture vehicle supplies. He was a caller at the Commercial club here the location of Paducah, and if he finds a site that suits him he probably will build his plant in this city.

GEOLOGICAL

SURVEY OF THIS SECTION IS RESUMED BY CLIFF.

Great Aid to Prospectors in Developing Natural Wealth of Country—State Aid.

Efforts are being made by the Paducah Commercial club to secure a geological survey of this section. An imperfect survey was made several years ago, but it is of little value. It is believed, Secretary Coons communicated with Commissioner of Agriculture Vreeland, asking for a copy of the survey of the Purchase, and the communication was referred to C. J. Norwood, state mine inspector at Lexington.

The value of a geological survey is great, especially in developing the section. It shows the nature of the soil, the formation of the earth and all the data needed in ascertaining the natural wealth of the country. If referring to it, prospectors for coal, iron ore or any kind of mineral, would know at once whether there is a chance of striking it. The formation and depths of the soil, its foundation, the topography of the country and the physical conditions of the section, would tell the expert agriculturalist all he desires to know about the prospects for various kinds of crops.

The state of Kentucky and the federal government have been working together in making these surveys, sharing the expense. Several sections of the state have been surveyed and every effort will be made to secure this benefit for this section.

Supreme Judge Dies.

Springfield, July 23.—Justice J. B. Ricks, of the Illinois supreme court, died at 5:15 o'clock this morning at his home in Taylorville. He literally starved to death. The cause of death was cancer of the stomach from which he suffered two years.

Dance at Wallace Park.

There will be a dance at Wallace park Friday night. List for the older crowd is at Rock's shoe store and for the younger crowd at Hayes' drug store.

PEACE CONFERENCE OPENS.

London, July 23.—The fourteenth meeting of the inter-parliamentary peace conference opened this morning in the west minister half of the house of lords. It will continue in session three days more. The work will be the discussion of the functions of the Hague tribunal. America is represented by Wm. Jennings Bryan, and Congressmen Burton, Hill, Granger, Goldfogle, Williams, Bartholdt and James.

RUSSELL SAGE'S CAREER IS ENDED

Great Money Lender Passes Peacefully Away.

Started as Clerk in Grocery Store and Died Possessing Interests in Railroads.

MET WITH BUT FEW REVERSES.

New York, July 23.—Russell Sage died suddenly at 4:30 p. m. o'clock Sunday at his country home, "Cenotaph," Lawrence, L. I. The immediate cause of death was heart failure resulted from a complication of diseases incident to old age. The veteran financier would have celebrated his 90th birthday on August 4. The funeral services will be held on Wednesday at West Presbyterian church of which Mr. Sage had been a member many years. The interment will take place at Troy Thursday.

Russell Sage, multi-millionaire and Nestor of American financiers, was born on August 4, 1816, in Verona, Oneida county, New York. At the age of 12 years Russell Sage began his career as an errand boy in the grocery store of his brother Henry in Troy. At the age of 22 he established a wholesale grocery of his own in that place.

In 1857 the young merchant had acquired a fortune estimated at almost half a million dollars. He had already become interested in railroads, his first transaction of this character being a loan to the La Crosse Railroad company, which led to further transactions, resulting in his acquiring large interests in the roads now forming the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul system, of which he became vice-president.

Mr. Sage in 1863 opened his first office in New York.

About this time he formed an association with Jay Gould.

At the time of his death Mr. Sage was an officer and director in 25 great railways and telegraph corporations.

An incident which startled the whole country occurred in Mr. Sage's office in the old Arcade building, No. 71 Broadway, on December 1, 1891. On that day he was visited by Henry P. Norcross of Boston, a man of unbalanced mind, who demanded an immediate gift of $1,200,000. When the demand was refused Norcross dropped a dynamite bomb upon the floor, the explosion of which decapitated Norcross, killed one of the clerks and wrecked the whole office. Mr. Sage was only slightly injured by the explosion.

Mr. Sage was married twice, first in 1841 to Miss Mary Winne, daughter of Moses I. Winne of Troy. His wife died in New York city in 1867 and two years later he married Margaret Oliva, daughter of Joseph Slocum, of Syracuse, N. Y.

KILL ANOTHER

PRISONER THREATENS BEFORE HE IS ELECTROCUTED.

Condemned Negro in Ohio Penitentiary Murdered One Guard—Thirsts for More Blood.

Columbus, O., July 23.—Butler Stiles, colored, awaiting execution at the penitentiary for the murder of Guard Morehead, made an assault upon Guard O'Brien this morning. He was subdued only after being knocked unconscious by six guards. Stiles was revived for 60 days last week by the governor, but declares he will kill another guard before he is electrocuted.

TWO HIGHWAYMEN ROB AMOS WILSON

Then They Throw Him Into a Mud Puddle.

Street Car Conductor "Struck Up" at the Point of a Revolver on Broadway.

MEETS MEN AT THE CROSSING.

Amos Wilson, of 1002 North Twelfth street, employed as a conductor by the street railroad company, was held up and robbed of $12 Saturday night about 9 o'clock at Eleventh street and Broadway by two white men. After he had been relieved of his burden of cash, the holdup men throw him down into a mud puddle, nearly ruining his uniform.

Wilson's wife was away from the city and he expected her home from Cairo Saturday night. She did not get off the train at the depot, and Wilson thought probably she had left the cars at Eleventh street and Broadway and went to this junction but no one was in sight. He started to leave when two men walked up to him.

"Throw up your hands" one commanded, displaying a shining revolver. Wilson did as directed and the companion started going through his pockets. He was "cleaned" of every cent he had, a $5 gold piece being among his coins.

"When they got through taking my money," Wilson stated, "they pushed me over into a big puddle of water, several inches deep, and ran. I think they were both smoothly shaven and wore light suits of clothes. I think I would recognize one if I saw him again."

One night preceding the Overstreet burglary arrests in several residences were cut but entrance not effected. Residents on West Jackson street are asking for more police protection.

LATE CROP

CANTALOUPE STEMS EATEN OFF BY WORMS THIS SUMMER.

Too Late to Ship North Now as Their Own Are Coming In—Started in Hot-Beds.

"It is now too late to ship cantaloupes, if there were sufficient to ship," said Mr. Bonds of the Bonds & Powell commission company. "Home grown cantaloupes are ripe in the north and we could not compete with them. To sell our produce it must be raised and shipped before their crops come in. The cantaloupe crop this year is only about half a normal yield. Worms have gotten in to the roots and the vines have wilted away. For outside shipment, cantaloupes should be planted early in hot-beds and then transplanted. Per-tillizer also could be profitably used."

TWENTY KILLED.

Fearful Wreck on Seaboard Air Line in Carolina.

Charlotte, N. C., July 23.—Latest reports from this hamlet near which the passenger and freight trains collided last night are to the effect that two white men and 18 negroes were killed and about 20 persons injured. Among the dead are Engineer Lewis and Fireman Hill, of the Passenger train on the Seaboard Air Line.

SEEING THE WEST.

Harold and Robert Fisher Will Make Tour of Pacific Coast on Trip.

Harold and Robert Fisher will have seen the whole of the west as it is revealed to the tourist before returning next month from their trip. They have left Denver and are on their way to Salt Lake City. Before returning they will visit Portland, Seattle, San Francisco, Los Angeles and the Yosemite Valley.

Confer With President.

Oyster Bay, July 23.—Speaker Cannon and representatives Sherman, Loudenslager, McKinley and Cocks came in the morning to hold a conference with the president over the congressional situation.

Thunder showers followed by cooler weather this afternoon or tonight. Tuesday fair and cooler. The highest temperature reached yesterday was 92 and the lowest today was 74.

DOG ACTED QUEERLY.

And Was Shot Last It Was Going Mad.

Quite a little excitement was created about two miles on the Mayfield road Saturday afternoon by a mad dog. Mrs. L. A. Lagomarsino was on her way to the cemetery, a few miles out on that road, when a dog, belonging to the family that had followed them began to act queerly and froth at the mouth. The dog it is thought, was never bitten by a mad dog, and the only solution to the queer act is that the extreme heat affected him. Colonel John Theobald, near whose home it occurred, shot the dog. The animal was an unusually fine one.

IN YEISER PARK

Complimentary Concert of County Officers Given.

Band concerts on the roof of the county court house is the latest wrinkle to surprise the public. The initial concert will be given tonight by the Paducah military band. It is the intention of the court house officials to continue them, giving one each week. The court house roof affords an excellent place for a band concert and the idea first suggested itself to County Judge H. T. Lightfoot. Lights will be placed on the roof for temporary use and the beautiful yard will doubtless be filled tonight. The hours are from 7:30 until 10 o'clock.

OUT IN STREET.

Household Effects of Defendant Were Set by Officers.

All the household effects of Ben Matthews, who resides on property belonging to J. J. Lane on the south side in the Tyler neighborhood, was removed from the house this morning by Constables B. F. Sears and A. C. Shelton and the house awarded to Lane. This action resulted from a suit brought in Justice George Broadfoot's court. Last week the court adjudged in favor of Lane. This morning the time of vacating expired and the household effects went out. Mrs. Matthews was away from home at the time. The action was brought for possession—not debt.

Will Stay at Home.

Mae Plemons, one of the nine girls sent from Paducah to the Home of the Good Shepherd, at Louisville, does not want to come back, but will remain in the institution one more year and be baptized.

This morning Chief of Police Jas. Collins, who placed the girl there one year ago, received a letter stating that she did not want to return.

EXCESSIVE HEAT

NEARLY CAUSES DEATH OF MAN-AGER MALONE AT PARK.

Loses Consciousness After Manipulating Moving Picture Machine—Out of Danger.

Overcome with heat while manipulating the moving picture machine at the Casino, Wallace park, last night during the free show, William Malone, manager of the park, was brought back to consciousness only after physicians had worked with him more than two hours.

The apparatus is in a little house room built in the back part of the theater and it is necessary in operating the machine to have the door of the room closed. The room is only sufficiently large for a man to stand behind the machine. Mr. Malone was in the room a half hour before he became strangely dizzy and closed the performance. He managed to walk to his house on the hill in the park and told his mother he was not feeling well.

With this declaration he fell across his bed and lost consciousness. His life was almost despaired of, but he is out of danger today.

Nothing is gained by abusing those whose opinions differ from your own.

ARREST RECALLS, GREEN GOODS GAME

Serious Charge Against D. M. Blackwell, of Scotts Hill.

Hobinson Brothers Swindled Out of $500 in Paducah Two Months Ago.

DENIES ANY GUILT IN CASE.

D. N. Blackwell, of Scotts Hill, Henderson county, Tenn., supposed to be the "go between" in a green goods swindle pulled off here May 29 at the St. Nicholas hotel, in which Lafayette and Frank Robinson, residents of Millar, Tenn., were swindled out of $470, was arrested Sunday morning at Scotts Hill by Deputy Sheriff J. W. Knowles and is out on a bond of $1,250 furnished by half a dozen prominent residents of his county. He will be brought to Paducah to answer to the charge of being an accomplice in defrauding the two Robinsons.

The arrest of Blackwell will recall one of the most successful green goods swindles ever perpetrated in the state. The two Robinsons came to Paducah by appointment to receive $5,000 in "green goods" for $500 in good coin. They allege that Blackwell, whom they had known for two years, suggested the place of meeting which was at the St. Nicholas hotel. This is as far as Blackwell went, except that he is said to have introduced or caused the two green goods men, Thomas Warren and B. Franklin and the Tennesseans to meet.

The quartette went upstairs in the hotel to room 18, which had been assigned two days before to a blacksmith named J. H. Hancock. Hancock was a stranger and not in his room at the time. The key was in the door, or the room open, and it was here that the deal was made. One of the green goods men stated that he had to go downstairs and started out. One of the Robinsons accompanied him, leaving his brother and the stranger together in the room. A few minutes after the couple departed the second green goods man stated that he would go into an adjoining room, No. 22, to secure the "green goods." He did and this was the last seen of him.

An investigation immediately after the "getaway" showed that the first swindler escaped through a window in the lavatory and placed a ladder against the window in room 22. This provided the means of escape for his "pal."

Hancock, the blacksmith, disclaimed any connection with the affair, but he disappeared shortly after the escape. The two green goods men escaped and have not been heard from, but Blackwell showed up at home later and was arrested Sunday morning.

Attorney N. R. Barham, of Lexington, Tenn., is in the city assisting in securing requisition papers. He stated: "Blackwell is a cross tie man and stands pretty high in his section. He has been there five years, and has been known intimately by the Robinsons for two years. This is why the latter say they thought nothing crooked about the green goods deal. Blackwell after he was arrested started with the deputy sheriff for Paducah. He was arrested on a warrant taken out in Tennessee, charging him with being a fugitive from justice but when Lexington was reached he refused to go on. He gave bond in the sum of $1,250 and was released. I am here acting for the prosecution, being employed by the Robinsons.

"My clients have written Blackwell many letters trying to settle the matter, but Blackwell stoutly denies that he was implicated and declares that he was not even in Paducah on the day or the day after the swindle is alleged to have been pulled off. He is well known, married and has the confidence of all his friends in Scotts Hill and vicinity.

CRAUELTY TO ANIMALS
Is Charged Against Driver by His Employer.

Terry Malone, a driver for Pat Lally, the grocer, is under arrest for cruelty to animals, and Mr. Lally in the prosecution of the young man exhibits a leniency towards the methods of practices of the humane society. Mr. Lally owns a delivery mule and Malone drives it. Malone is alleged to have beaten the mule unmercifully, and when his employer heard of it, he was arrested. The case will be tried tomorrow in police court.

PERRY'S HOME RUN WON THE VICTORY

Paducah Defeats Danville Four to Three.

Calro Seems to Be Inflexible and Ties Jacksonville for Second Place.

VINCENNES IS STILL IN LEAD.

Team Standing.	P.	W.	L.	Pct.
Vincennes	79	50	29	.632
Jacksonville	79	41	38	.518
Calro	79	41	38	.518
PADUCAH	78	38	40	.487
Danville	80	36	44	.451
Mattoon	78	30	48	.383

Sunday's Results.
Paducah, 4; Danville, 3.
Vincennes, 4; Mattoon, 1.
Calro, 4; Jacksonville, 1.

Today's Schedule.
Paducah at Jacksonville.
Calro at Danville.
Vincennes at Mattoon.

Danville, Ill., July 23.—Perry knocked home run yesterday and won from the locals by a score of 4 to 3. The hit was one of the hardest seen here this season, and the little shortstop made the circuit of the sacks like a streak of greased lightning.

The Indians had been playing in hard luck with Perry crippled by a broken finger, but the injury had healed sufficiently to permit the plucky little infielder to get into the game, and he celebrated with a home run.

There was no one on base when the trick was turned, and Perry tried hard for it. He hit it "where they wasn't," and got applause that was deafening. Both teams used two pitchers, and hits tallied. The Indians made an error, however, and this gave the locals a margin to work with.

The score: R H E
Paducah..... 4 8 1
Danville..... 3 8 0
Batteries—Brahic, Wright and Downing; Selby, Christman and Ott.

Hoosiers Take Another.
Vincennes, Ind., July 23.—The Hoosiers took yesterday's game from the Hostlers by hard hitting. Tom Gingles was secured off Dowell and Whitley permitted but four. The few errors made had no material bearing on the result.

The score: R H E
Vincennes..... 4 10 4
Mattoon..... 1 4 3
Batteries—Whitley and Matteson; Dowell and Johnson.

Tadpoles Win Again.
Jacksonville, Ill., July 23.—The Tadpoles are "coming some," and took yesterday's game from the Belittes with ease. The Tadpoles found a hitting streak and batted out ten singles on Alton. Woodring, the new recruit to the Tadpole pond, did effective work and only six scattered singles were secured off him.

Calro's pitching staff is weak and efforts are being made to strengthen it in this department. Otherwise the team is considered as strong as any in the Kitty league.

The score: R H E
Calro..... 4 10 0
Jacksonville..... 1 6 5
Batteries—Woodring and Qulessier; Alton and Bell.

Saturday's Games.
Danville 4, Paducah 2.
Jacksonville 6, Calro 5.
Vincennes 2, Mattoon 0.

Indiana Lose.
Danville, July 23.—Hits and errors tallied, and it was a pitcher's battle. Bunched hits won for Danville.

The score: R H E
Danville..... 4 7 1
Paducah..... 2 7 1
Batteries—Hollycross and Ott; Tadlock and Downing.

Belittes Win.
Jacksonville, July 23.—Everybody hit but Calro error gave Jacksonville the game.
The score: R H E
Jacksonville..... 6 13 0
Calro..... 5 11 1
Batteries—Hatch and Qulessier; Fox and Bell.

Hoosiers Still Going.
Vincennes, July 21.—The Hoosiers won today from Mattoon by a score of 2 to 0. It was a pitchers' battle and Perdue excelled.
The score: R H E
Vincennes..... 2 4 2
Mattoon..... 0 3 2
Batteries—Perdue and Matteson; McCarthy and Johnson.

Hope.
The Paducah team is seriously crippled on account of the absence of Shortstop Groh, who is on the sick list. He is one of the fastest infielders in the league and a tower of strength to the Indians.—Mattoon Star.

It is said that Col. Furbaker will soon be back doing baseball work on the Calro Bulletin, now that the financial troubles of the "Uncertainties" are settled. The colonel certainly knows how to boost the sport for all it is worth.—Mattoon Star.

THE BIG LEAGUES

National League.
Chicago, 6; Brooklyn, 3. Batteries—Pfeister and Moran; Scanlon and Bergen.
St. Louis, 4; Boston, 1. Batteries—Beebe and Grady; Young and Needham.
Cincinnati, 13; Philadelphia, 8. Batteries—Welmer and Schiel; Richie and Doolin.
Second game.
Cincinnati, 10; Philadelphia, 3. Batteries—Ewing and Schiel; Roy Pittinger and Donovan.

Saturday's Games.
Washington-St. Louis (rain).
Philadelphia 3, Chicago 2.
New York 1, Detroit 6.
Boston-Cleveland (rain).

National League.
Pittsburg 8, New York 2.
Cincinnati 2, Phila. 2, 10 innings.
Chicago 3, Brooklyn 6.
St. Louis 5, Boston 1.

Turning Lead Into Gold.

The ancient alchemists were not all charlatans, writes Prof. R. A. Millikan in Technical World Magazine for August. They were simply men who were striving—most of them earnestly and seriously—to find the secret of producing any desired transformation of matter. They were trying to convert one substance into another by varying the proportions of the constituent elements.

Some of the ablest minds of the Middle Ages were engaged in this search. Roger Bacon Spinoza, Luther and Leibnitz all believed in the Philosophers' Stone and in the transmutation of the metals.

What does modern science have to say on this subject? To the question, "Are the elements transmutable in the laboratories of nature?" we may return the answer that certain of them at least are transmutable, and it is probable that in nature's laboratories all of them are being produced from some simple primordial stuff.

It seems probable also that the "Universal Solvent" which will produce this transmutation, and which is perhaps producing it now in the stars, is temperature. But, unfortunately, the temperatures required to produce these changes are probably forever beyond man's reach.

But if the secret of this transformation should ever be found, we should be able to unlock almost infinite stores of energy which we now know to be wrapped up in the atoms of the elements.

Should man ever be able to unlock this energy, he would doubtless look back upon the day in which his progenitors burned coal to warm their houses and to drive their engines, with the same curiosity and pity with which we look back upon the day when our naked ancestors glowed their fields with a crooked stick, and lit their fires with the spark from a flint.

IN THE LOBBY

"That street looks like a stockyard," said a traveler at the hotel last night speaking of Fifth street. However, it was not a fair time to judge the streets as it was at the close of day and the street cleaning had not begun. "I suppose the brick streets are the best kind, but the asphalt is the prettiest. In Chicago they have noticed a peculiar effect automobiles have on asphalt streets. The tire on the automobiles seem to create a suction which draws the asphalt up, and as they are continually passing over the streets, it is feared that permanent damage will result. It has been proposed to prohibit by ordinance, automobile driving on Michigan avenue in Chicago."

"Paducah is nearly as large as it can grow as a whole town with the territory it now competes in for a market," said a man who has watched the city's growth for years, and who travels in this part of the country. "The city is circumscribed in some of its jobbing trade by the large cities around it. But you have some enterprises which can compete with the other cities anywhere in the country, and your growth in the future, it seems to me, must be from securing these kind of concerns. Probably the people in Paducah do not know how free from knockers the city is. The outsider notices it immediately, and that more than any other one thing probably has been responsible for your remarkable growth, considering your location."

"Many there are who hope the souvenir postal card had never died," said Mr. Herman Wilcox at the Palmer House last night, "and I am one of them. I heard from a sister who hadn't written to me in ten years by means of one of these little cards. There wasn't anything on it but a picture and line of good wishes, but it was enough. We had sort of drifted apart after we left home. We have no common home now and we haven't seen each other. Of course, our interests are separate now. If we met we would talk over old times, but in correspondence I suppose we'd be a strain on both of us after these years. I am busy and she is a family. Somehow I hadn't thought much about her of late, but that foolish little postal card with just a line on it made me feel hotter than anything I have received in a long while. I'll bet there are lots of people who have been made happy just as I was by one of those foolish cards."

Another productive source of country scandal is to be out of. The party telephone line is doomed.

This edict has gone forth from the office of the Cumberland Telephone company and applies to the local exchange. The reason given is the increase in rural subscribers and the consequent demand for better service.

Country swains and their sweethearts will be made happy by the change, for no longer will their sweet secrets be made common property of the neighborhood by eavesdropping subscribers at some other call on the line.

Many a woman's reputation has been ruined by the party line, and many a deal for good farm land has been shipped by a wise head with the receiver's phone held surreptitiously to the ear.

"How long have you been waiting out here for me?" exclaimed a Paducah woman with surprise when her country hostess met her at the end of the lane on the "big road."

"Oh, I knew you were coming," the other replied, "Mrs. Jones just telephoned that you had passed her house. Mrs. Jones is on our line. She overheard you tell me you were coming out. All the others on the line knew you were coming, too, and I received four reports of your progress this morning."

"That accounts for the fact that all the women along the route were standing out in front of their houses when I passed, doesn't it?" the city woman replied. "I presume they heard the first one announce my passing and were watching."

Country people will miss the party line for some reasons and enjoy the change for others.

The Texas Wonder
Cures all kidney, bladder and rheumatic troubles; sold by J. H. Oehl-schlaeger, 601 Broadway, Dr. E. W. Hall, office 2326 Olive street, St. Louis, Mo.

A Trite Saying.

It is a trite saying that no man is stronger than his stomach. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery strengthens the stomach—puts it in shape to make pure, rich blood—helps the liver and kidneys to expel the poisons from the body and thus cures both liver and kidney troubles. If you take this natural blood purifier and tonic, you will assist your system in manufacturing each day a pint of rich, red blood, that is invigorating to the whole and nerves. The weak, nervous, run-down, debilitated condition which so many people suffer from, is usually the effect of poisons in the blood; it is often induced by pimples or boils appearing on the skin, the face becomes thin and the feelings "blue." Dr. Pierce's "Discovery" cures all blood humors as well as being a tonic that makes one vigorous, strong and forceful. It is the only medicine put up for sale through druggists for like purposes that contains neither alcohol nor harmful habit-forming drugs, and the only one, every ingredient of which has the professional endorsement of the leading medical writers of this country. For the several endorsements are published in a little book of extracts from standard medical works and will be sent to any address free on receipt of Postal note or letter or postal card, addressed to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y. It tells just what Dr. Pierce's medicine is made of. The "Words of Praise" for the several ingredients which Dr. Pierce's medicine is composed, by leaders in all the several schools of medical practice, and recommending them for the cure of the diseases for which the "Golden Medical Discovery" is advised, should have far more weight with the sick and afflicted than any amount of the so-called "testimonials" so commonly found before the public by those who are afraid to let the judgments of which their medicines are composed be known. Hear in mind that the "Golden Medical Discovery" has the endorsement of every body of men in a full list of its ingredients. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation, invigorate the liver and regulate the stomach and bowels.

Dr. Pierce's great thousand-page illustrated Common Sense Medical Adviser will be sent free, paper-bound, for 21 one-cent stamps, or cloth-bound for 31 stamps. Address Dr. Pierce as above.

ANNIVERSARY

WILL BE CELEBRATED BY PADUCAH AERIE.

Preparations Being Made by Eagles to Attend National Convention in Milwaukee.

On Thursday, August 2, Paducah Aerie, No. 1177, Fraternal Order of Eagles, will celebrate its first anniversary. An elaborate program will be rendered and a banquet served at the Eagles' Home, Sixth street and Broadway, with a reception for ladies in the afternoon. The celebration is in charge of a committee, of which Hon. Louis P. Head is chairman, and this committee is now arranging the program.

A number of prominent members of neighboring aeries are expected, notably Mr. Fred W. Talmie, president of Nashville Aerie, No. 86, and Hon. W. H. Southall, Jr., of Hopkinsville Aerie, No. 1131, both of whom will deliver addresses. A musical program will be arranged.

The local aerie has increased in the last year from 100 to nearly 300 members.

Arrangements are being made by Paducah Aerie for the trip to the annual convention in Milwaukee, August 13 to 18. Hon. Hal S. Corbett will be the representative, while others who expect to attend are Louis P. Head, Hen Welle, Louis S. Levy, G. B. Elmore and D. P. Martin.

Hon. Louis P. Head announces that he will resume publication of "The Southern Eagle" on August 20. The paper was started in March last, but owing to Mr. Head's necessary absence from the city most of the summer, its issue was temporarily suspended.

Even at this stage of the game there are men who deny that George Washington ever owned a hatchet.

ART OF DINING

NEW YORK TIMES PHILOSOPHERS ON SUBJECT.

About the Gotham Institutions That Cater to Men's Appetites and Their Science.

There is no doubt about it! The way to a man's heart is through his stomach—aye, and to his business, his humors, his everything. When one considers the amount of history that has been made upon a good meal and the amount of history made for the lack of one, the influence of a healthy or otherwise stomach upon civilization must be appreciated, observed the New York Times.

The diners of the Thirteenth club in this city are excellent examples of what can be done to induce the inner man to stop sulking. To sit thirteen at a table encased with umbrellas and with thirteen candles stuck in an equal number of glaring skulls almost drives the inner man to shame or curiosity, so that he either sits to see what will happen, or says to himself:

"Well, with hoodlums all around, I might as well have a last square meal."

I know one amusing case of an inner man's melancholy. The guardian of the inner man didn't know what to do with him (or it). He (or it) sulked three times a day and refused to be comforted. Finally the guardian of the inner man went to a friend—a gray old colonel, tanned with the years and pickled with—well, pickled—and, expressing his wonder at the colonel's good health asked him—gleefully, of course—what was the use of cutting, anyway? It was a waste of time, he said, and distasteful. "What!" said the colonel indignantly. "You don't appreciate the favors of God, sir. What's the use? Huh! If I couldn't eat four times a day and enjoy it I'd ask the good Lord to remove me and the favors at the same time. What your inner man wants, sir, is a holiday—a little outing. If you can't face a restaurant, why, climb a tree, man, climb a tree. Hot you $10 you'll eat like a horse."

And it was even so. The melancholy one climbed a tree in his country home and had his breakfast served in the fork. He ate like a horse and asked for more.

There is the secret of feeding—a little novelty at the right time. And that brings us to the story—which has been long of coming, perhaps, but like the delayed steak, may be all the more acceptable when it is finally served.

The Science of Dining.

Among the city's best restaurants are undoubtedly those around Times Square. They are the places where people go to dine not three times a day, but in the spirit of novelty that comes with an evening's outing. And in one of those restaurants one may see to what perfection the science of treating that unruly inner man has come.

While the orchestra drones and the usher shows you and the lady to a table and the waiter murmurs something about nothing while his left hand serves you even the trouble of drawing in your chair, down in the basement scores of men are shoving that these things may be possible. Even while the waiter bows and intimates by a wave of the hand that broiled lobster shall glide from the sea to the plate, being cooked en route, down below the slaves of the tyrant inner man are pulling that lobster from the ice box and through four or five compartments. More departments are measuring out the number of plates you will want and the silver you will need, and the waiter, visiting another department, states what size of tray you will require for pleasing service.

And all because you said you were willing to pay a dollar for a broiled lobster. The waiter may know you by name, but whether he does or not matters little, except that a certain acquaintance may make the choice of that lobster a little more personal than systematic. For the rest you are only a number on the top of a bill check which passes from shellfish department to salad department, to grill department, whence come your soups, fish, relishes, desserts, loaves, cheeses and beverages (that cheer and do, or do not, lubricate, according to your choice.)

It certainly is a wonderful sight down below there—with slaves by the galley fires. The diners who raise their glasses to the radiant, smiling women across the table would be surprised if they could peer into this inferno of heat and engine-room activity. Perhaps it would spoil the appetite, for, indeed, the science of eating has come to this—that every meal must be served with a magic environment of sound, light and color. And, of course, all this means greater toil for the makers of the feast.

Here in the basement a hurrying throng of men, some wearing white caps and aprons, some the aprons without the white caps. They rush about, jostling one another and swearing vociferously, while to the diners is added the rattle of dishes, the crash of mixed silver, and the hissing and sputtering from the dozen or more gas ranges where the white-capped men fling and flip and season and prod, one hand on the pan handle, the other brandishing the fork.

Women as Inventors.

In reply to the charge that women are lacking in mechanical ingenuity, writes Rene Bache in Technical World Magazine for August. It is asserted that many of the most valuable inventions patented by men in reality represent ideas conceived in the brains of their wives, their sisters and their daughters. Eli Whitney's famous cotton-gin is said to have been merely the application of a device first thought out by a woman—the widow of General Nathaniel Greene.

The "Cotton Light," which is used by our life-saving service, and by mariners all over the world, for signaling at night—it burns red fire—is a woman's invention. So likewise is the paper bag with a satchel bottom, which was the idea of Miss M. E. Knight. The machine by which "comb foundation," as it is called, for bee-hives, is made, was patented by Frances A. Dunham in 1881. It saves bees half the labor of honey-comb construction by turning out wax sheets, which, suspended in the hives, serves as a basis to build the combs upon. But the most wonderful point about the contrivance is that, the cells outlined in relief on the wax being all of "worker" size, those of them that are utilized by the insects for nursery purposes will produce only worker bees, thus avoiding the propagation of drones.

FOR IMMIGRATION PLANS PROGRESS

Many Letters Favoring The Scheme Received.

Credentialed for Agent From State Board of Agriculture and Forestry.

MUCH WORK AHEAD OF BUREAU.

Immigration plans are progressing with the local bureau, which the Commercial club is promoting, and Secretary Coons received in his mail this morning several letters, which greatly encourage him.

The first was from Hubert Vreeland, commissioner of agriculture, enclosing the long-desired certificate of the Kentucky state department of forestry and immigration. This certificate under the seal of the state, authorizes the Paducah agent in Germany to solicit immigrants for this section. It was forwarded to him today, as he sailed last Tuesday without it.

The certificate is as follows: This is to certify that at a meeting of the State Board of Agriculture, Forestry and Immigration held at Louisville, Kentucky, July 20, 1906, the plan of the Paducah Commercial club of Paducah, Kentucky, to send Mr. Andrew H. Veltshberger to Germany to secure the immigration to this state of some five hundred German families of good character was endorsed by this board.

Signed: HUBERT VREELAND, Chairman. CLARENCE SAILE, Secretary.

David Robinson, commissioner of immigration at New York, requested some pamphlets in German concerning this section and was supplied. He said he has several applications of immigrants for locations.

Secretary Coons stated that because of lack of preparations he had to refuse the offer of twenty immigrant families. He is exerting every endeavor to get affairs in shape to take care of arrivals in the fall. The local bureau will have to furnish a house for the immigrants for six weeks.

Favor the Project.

Several letters also were received in reply to the circular letter of Secretary Coons, asking the assistance of people in other counties of Western Kentucky in promoting immigration for this section. They were all favorable to the project. Some of the letters follow:

Dear Sir: Your favor 16th is before me. I have read it, and your proposed plan to increase immigration to this section of Kentucky. Any more looking to this interest is certainly commendable. I am willing to help as best I can. I will suggest the following names of Lyon county citizens who may interest themselves in your plan:

J. C. Glenn, Kuttawa, Ky.; N. O. Gray, Kuttawa, Ky.; C. W. Davis, Saratoga, Ky.; E. H. James, Eddyville, Ky.; S. R. Glenn, Eddyville, Ky. Very truly,

M. P. MOLLAY, Eddyville.

Dear Sir: Your circular letter of the 12th calling attention to plans set forth in the Paducah paper, to

WORK WEAKENS THE KIDNEYS

Doan's Kidney Pills Have Done Great Service for People Who Work in Paducah.

Most Paducah people work every day in some strained, unnatural position—bending constantly over a desk—riding on jolting wagons or cars—doing laborious housework: lifting, reaching or pulling, or trying the back in a hundred and one other ways. All these strains tend to wear, weaken and injure the kidneys until they fall off in their work of filtering the poisons from the blood. Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys, put new strength in bad backs. Paducah cures prove it.

T. W. Woodson, of 19 South Ninth street, painter, employed with C. D. Warren, 408 1/2 Broadway, says: "Every palator is more or less troubled with his kidneys on account of the nature of his work. We all know what causes it, but how to remove it is a mystery. I tried lots of medicine and different schemes, but until I procured Doan's Kidney Pills at Alvey & List's drug store and took them I met with very indifferent success. They cured the trouble."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-McBarn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

hand, contents noted, I also carefully looked over the item in the paper, and would like very much to do something to build up this part of the country. There is a lot of undeveloped land between this place and Paducah, Ky., and would be a very great help to this county if developed, and as I see your efforts begin to expand will rejoice and perhaps by that time I will be able to help carry on the good work.

I will ever be ready to help you get up a description for your advertising in this part of the section.

Very truly yours to command, M. R. COX, Birmingham.

Dear Sir: Am in receipt of yours of the 16th inst. The names you desire I send you as follows: N. O. Gray, president Kuttawa Commercial club; Otto Fowler, secretary Kuttawa Commercial club; T. E. Mollay, Eddyville Ky.; H. S. King, Eddyville, Ky.; James A. Wilson, Lamasco, Ky.

I am pleased with your plan. It ought to succeed. Thank you for your invitation to become a member of the board of directors, but think possibly the names I am sending you would be more suitable.

Very truly, W. J. STONE, Kuttawa.

Gentlemen: I have your favor of the 16th inst., and I nearly approve of your undertaking to secure desirable immigrants to settle in this section of Kentucky.

Yours very truly, J. E. ROBBINS, Mayfield.

Mr. D. W. Coons, Secretary C. C. Paducah, Ky.:

Dear Sir: Your favor of the 19th received. If you will supply this office with German literature concerning your section I can make good use of it, as we are having many inquiries from this class. We not only have many inquiries, but are sending from 50 to 100 people south each week, out of which this bureau receives nothing. I hope to have a number of boards of trade within the next thirty days, and also a number of industries.

With best wishes, very truly, DAVID ROBINSON, Commissioner.

Making a City to Order.

Twenty miles southeast of Chicago a slow sleepy river winds through the tall rank grasses of its marshy course, and empties into Lake Michigan, writes Dewey Sheldon Beebe in Technical World Magazine for August. The straggling oaks and stunted tushes which somehow keep alive in the shifting sand, only serve to emphasize the barren waste. Carol, natives of southern deserts, here flourish in abundance. Hot winds blow the sand into ever-changing billows, and the lake lies hot and piercing in the glaring sun. The river—"Grand Calumet," so-called—is but a tiny stream, so stagnant in places that its current and the marsh can hardly be distinguished.

Three years hence, the traveler along these shores will be greeted by the busy clatter of a large city. The whole face of nature has been changed. The outline of the coast is now symmetrical. As he approaches the river, a great harbor meets his gaze. The largest steamers can now navigate the river, and an ideal haven is afforded the huge freighters which ply between Lake Superior and this new city. A confusion of changing metallic noises and the shouts of men turn the traveler's attention toward the sand hills where great black clouds of heavy smoke, hanging above leaping flames and glaring furnaces betray the reason for this sudden transformation from desert quiet to swarming industry. The largest steel mills of the world here give employment to 15,000 workmen. Two square miles are filled with noisy mills and belching furnaces. The magnitude of the great plant is overpowering.

That this transformation shall take place, has been decreed by the directors of the United States Steel corporation. To give weight to their words they have bought 6,000 acres of land on the Grand Calumet river, drawn up the plans for the new steel plant and city, and have made possible this, the greatest industrial project of all time, by voting $75,000,000 for the enterprise.

Reading Made Easy.

In a study of the physiological aspect of reading the curious fact has been brought out that the characteristic features of letters are found for the most part in the upper halves, so that as the reader's attention is here directed he is often able to read a line with the lower half of the letters covered. It has, accordingly, occurred to some French scientists that some considerable improvements could be made in typography, working along these lines, and that increased legibility and rapidity of reading would result. Some of these suggestions have received a practical application in some European advertising signs, where legibility is a prime essential and the results have been most satisfactory. TIMELY ARRIVAL AVERTS ROBBERY

Assault Made on Agent When Paducahman Appeared.

Best King and His Military Band Play Part of Hosing Party at Kuttawa.

SOME OF THEM NEARLY SHOT.

Would-be robbers, who attacked M. S. Fröhlich, night ticket agent and operator for the Illinois Central at Kuttawa a few miles east of Paducah, on the Illinois Central railroad, Sunday morning between 1 and 2 o'clock, were frightened away by the unexpected appearance of Mr. Bert King, director of the Paducah Military band, and several members of his organization.

Saturday there was a picnic, baseball game and speaking at Eddyville. Governor Hob Taylor, of Tennessee, was the speaker featured and the Paducah band was secured to furnish the music. The band finished its work before night and six members remained to play as an orchestra. These members frustrated the attempted robbery, but they came near being made the mark for several shots from the agent's revolver before they could make themselves known.

"We were walking from Eddyville to Kuttawa," Mr. King explained. "All members of the band had gone home on the 6 o'clock train except those we needed in orchestra, and the morning train is not scheduled to stop at Eddyville but does stop at Kuttawa. The distance is only about a mile and we walked it."

"When we were in sight of the depot at Kuttawa we heard a crash and noticed that a window light in the building had been broken out. A second crash followed in quick succession and this took off the top of the lamp chimney. The agent could not be seen from where we were, but he made his appearance in double-quick time. He carried a big pistol and raised it in our direction. He heard us, I presume, and thought we had thrown into the depot. He was about to shoot when the third crash came and it came from a different direction. The agent turned his weapon into the darkness and began to shoot."

"We arrived shortly after he finished the fusillade and it is believed that had we not come up at this opportune time, it might have meant a robbery of the agent."

It is presumed the rocks were thrown into the depot to attract the attention of the agent to the outside, so that he could be seized from behind and rendered powerless to prevent the burglary.

took a liberal amount of the last Japanese loan, over half of the Russian loan of last April, and finally, they supplied borrowers in the United States with fully $150,000,000 during the tight-money period of last winter, and are now financing the bond and note issues of some of our greatest corporations.—Review of Reviews.

Fancies.

A graft is the other man's pull. Some people are too busy being good, to be kind. Riches have wings, but most of us never get a chance to fly with them. Business Independence Through Advertising

The degree of business independence you enjoy in the sales end of your business is measured by the demand for your goods by the consumer.

WITHOUT a healthy demand from the consumer you must constantly conciliate for very life every salesman, jobber and retailer who handles your wares.

Without consumer demand all of these forces are hammering down your price while running up your selling cost.

Your profits are in danger.

There's only one way to build up consumer demand.

Advertise.

Expensive? Well, newspaper advertising, for instance, is not nearly so expensive as extra trade discounts, concessions in many other forms, excessive salaries to salesmen, commissions out of all proportion to jobbers and profits beyond reason for retailers.

Expensive? Not if you get right down to business—avoid experimental waste.

Experimental waste is what our Record of Results enables us to minimize for advertisers.

The Lord & Thomas Record of Results is a classified, tabulated record of the experience of so MANY and of such a comprehensive VARIETY of propositions, that practically every class of advertised commodity is thoroughly covered.

Through its guidance and proper interpretation, YOU can start at a point in advertising which otherwise it would take years of expensive experimental work to reach—because without the guidance of this record you would have to go it blind.

One of our representatives is in your city every few days, looking after the interests of some of our present clients. That is why we are advertising in this newspaper—to you—NOW.

We want to explain to you, in person, what the Lord & Thomas Record of Results means to you in Dollars and Cents. If Lord & Thomas Advertising will increase your business and profits, you need us. If your decision is not in our favor, we will not importune you for an advertising order.

We ask you to write today—granting us an interview in your office. You will in no way obligate yourself by asking us to call.

We are issuing a series of small books (cloth bound) covering advertising in all its phases, which we send free to interested advertisers.

Daily Thought.
"Success is avoiding old mistakes."

And now the Herald "personals," almost an institution of metropolitan life, must fall before the ruthless hand of postal reforms. "Red Light Directory" they may be called, but they were more. They were the adaptation of the time honored "properties" of the clandestine rural romance to modern urban conditions. Herald "personals" constituted the hollow oak tree of New York's east side lovers. No longer will confiding blue eyes search down the long, profitable column, until they rest with ecstatic delight on an ambiguous message, perhaps in cipher, signed with a familiar nom de plume. It takes half the romance out of the city's existence. And what a deprivation for the reading public! What little flashes of life are caught in these concise expressions of extemporaneous regard for passing strangers! These brief lines are the soul of art, for the true artist never goes further than to suggest an idea to the imagination. And no one can doubt after reading a column of them that much is left to the imagination. "If the lady in the Princess dress who trapped Gen's toe who was sitting down and she was hanging on to strap and he smiled at her when she apologized over his paper would like to meet Gen, address X, Gen, delivery." They may be immoral, these personals; they certainly are ungrammatical; but they have made life merrier, not to the object of their flattery, but to the rest of us.

Can anyone outside France form a reasonable conclusion as to why the cross of the Legion of Honor was conferred on Alfred Dreyfus? What has he ever done to merit such distinguished consideration? Was it because he was not guilty of treason? Has the French army retrograded to the condition in which the negative virtues are rewarded with the highest honor of the republic? Or, was his selection due to an hysterical reaction in his favor, which swept public opinion to the opposite extreme? If France isn't careful the Legion of Honor will be as common as our own legion of L. L. D's.

THE CHURCHES

EXCELLENT ATTENDANCE AT ALL SERVICES YESTERDAY.

Children's Day.

Children's Day was observed at the Third street Methodist church yesterday. Both morning and evening were given over to the young people and they acquitted themselves creditably. The program for the day was made up of speeches, songs and recitations, a whistling chorus being the feature of the day. The Rev. Peter Fields is enthusiastic over the work.

Next Sunday at this church the Rev. Hunsacker, who is here visiting, will fill the pulpit both in the morning and evening.

Farewell Sermon.

The Rev. S. H. Eshman preached his farewell sermon last evening at the Cumberland Presbyterian church, taking "The Final Judgment" as his topic. He also filled his pulpit in the morning. The Rev. Mr. Eshman has made many friends during his stay in this city. He will return to Tennessee tomorrow.

Broadway Methodist.

Large congregations were present at the Broadway Methodist church yesterday. In the evening a song service was held and the large church was almost filled. The Rev. T. J. Newell's morning topic was: "Shall We Educate or Serve?"

The following participated at the evening service: Mrs. D. M. Flournoy, Miss Caroline Ham, Miss Julia Scott, Messrs. Robert D. McMillen, Robert H. Scott and Emmet Hagley.

At the Baptist.

The Rev. J. G. Bow, secretary of the Baptist state board of missions, filled the pulpit of the First Baptist church in the morning and made a favorable impression on those present. In the evening he dismissed early, declining to meet the deacons of the Second church. Many of the members attended the song service at the Broadway Methodist church.

Cream Ale Non-Intoxicant.

The cases in the police court against John Barker, and Tasha Wiley for selling intoxicants was dismissed this morning. The arrested have been selling Cream Ale, the product of A. M. Laevison & company, which has been held repeatedly to be a non-intoxicant, and on the evidence the case was dismissed.

The Cure of Headaches.

By Osteopathy.

"What bone would you pull to treat a headache?" asked a layman. Any bone that may be out of its correct position in the neck or back, so as to bring its pressure upon the nerves which express the pain sense—that is, if the headache happens to be due to a bony slip; but of course it may not be at all. That is one frequent cause, but there are many others which are apt to be operative. A muscular contraction in the back in the neck, or over the head, may likewise cause headache. Indigestion, eye-strain, mental fatigue, a sluggish liver, constipation, kidney disease, and many other things are frequent causes of headache. Hence the cure of headache osteopathically is the cure of its cause or causes. To find the remedy these causes, having as they usually do an anatomical basis, requires special and thorough training, and that is why osteopathy exists as an independent school of medicine. Its practitioners are specialists. They cure headaches, as they do other diseases not by "pulling," but by finding the cause of each special headache and giving that cause whatever treatment is needed to cure it. So in a dozen different headaches none might be treated alike osteopathically, and yet ten or eleven of the dozen would likely be cured.

Osteopathy is probably doing more for suffering humanity than any recent discovery, and I should like for you to investigate its merits. I should be pleased to see all who may be interested in osteopathy at any time from 9 a. m. to 12 and 2 to 5 p. m.

Osteopathy is the same, rational treatment of illness and disorders.

SMITH FAMILY

AND PADUCAH WILL NOT FORGET THIS MEETING.

Policemen, Railroad Officials and Wharfmen Figure in Their Experience.

George Smith, his wife, his brother and two children, hailing from Arkansas and traveling in a wagon, the green. They traveled overland yesterday and robbers, gruff railroad officials and every class of agent, even down to the policeman, came within the range of their experiences. Smith will have every reason to remember Paducah and some people in Paducah will not forget Smith. The family "ramped out" on the front porch of a Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis official, converted the shed of the Aycock Hotel into a temporary stable, and tried to ship a horse and farm wagon over the railroad in a passenger train. The railroad was preferable to steamboat travel because the latter offered too many opportunities for pilfering. In fact Smith declared that an attempt was made to rob him on the Paducah wharf.

Patrolman Henry Siney was standing near the N. C. & St. L. depot when the Smiths drove up in a one-horse wagon. They thought he was a railroad conductor and asked if they could ship their horse and wagon to Wildersfield, Tenn., on the passenger train. They were sent to Frank Adams, the ticket agent. When Siney noticed the yoked again he was trying to climb through the small window to get at the agent. Finally Smith was made to understand that he had gone to the wrong place, and was directed to the residence of Agent E. S. Burnham, a short distance away. Mr. Burnham was eating dinner and had no time to talk business, so the family was forced to wait. The front porch presented such an excellent appearance that it was converted into a dining table by the Smiths and him, pies, chicken and many other edibles were brought to light. When the meal was finished Mr. Burnham's front yard looked like a bone yard. The horse had been left in front of the house and when the party started to go, one of the boys led the horse down the pavement to the Aycock Knitting mill. A wooden porch projects over the pavement and this was used to shelter the horse. When the rain came up it proved the best place they could secure for supper and they again spread their lunch and dined. They declared that an attempt had been made to rob them on the wharf and they decided the railroad would be the safest means of transportation. The family left yesterday but the horse and wagon remain in Paducah totally abandoned.

With a stage of eleven and seventeenth feet, the river is higher here now than it has been since May 19, when the spring rise was subsiding. The river has risen 1.2 feet in the last 48 hours. Rain fell in the same period, .64 inches. Business at the wharf was good since Saturday.

Captain Bewley, of the Dirk Fowler, is establishing a precedent which profitably could be followed by all captains, and which would be a great accommodation to the river traveling public. He is leaving promptly on time every morning and in doing so invariably leaves passengers and freight, which might be carried by waiting a few minutes over schedule time. This morning two wagon loads of groceries were standing within ten feet of the boat at 8 o'clock, but the boat pulled out without waiting to take on the freight. The Dirk Fowler is at the wharf all night so that there is little excuse for being tardy delivering freight to it. Saunders Fowler thinks the passenger business is stimulated by the boat following such a policy, and the freight business soon can become accustomed to prompt methods.

The City of Saltillo arrived at noon Sunday from St. Louis on the trip to the Tennessee river. Insufficient labor at St. Louis made the Saltillo late arriving.

The Savannah came out of the Tennessee river at 1 o'clock last night on the return trip to St. Louis. The Henry Harley left today for Nashville to run in the upper Cumberland river trade as long as the present rise lasts. Sunday the Henry Harley ran an excursion for negroes to Eddyville, which was well patronized. The boat left at 10 o'clock and returned at 1 o'clock last night. No freight was received for the trip to Nashville.

The Dunbar will not leave Nashville until this evening arriving here Tuesday night late or Wednesday morning. An extra trip above Nashville knocked out the regular trip to Clarksville today from this place.

The Clyde will be due to arrive out of the Tennessee river this evening and lie over until Wednesday before returning.

The Joe Fowler left on time this morning for Evansville having arrived Sunday from that place.

The Inverness arrived from the Tennessee river this morning and will leave this afternoon for the Cumberland river after tea.

The Buttorff will be let into the river off the ways Tuesday afternoon or Wednesday morning. The Gate City has nearly completed installing the boilers secured from the sunken Gullwing Star and probably will leave Wednesday.

The Dunbar and Henrietta are scheduled to go on the dry docks soon for repairs. The Bob Dudley still has much repairing to be done. The Kit Carson and the Sciota of Davenport, Ia., also will go on the docks.

NINE FOOT STAGE FOR OHIO RIVER

Advantages Set Forth in the Speech of J. L. Vance.

Flowers Realized Force of Water Rates and Franklin Was Early Advocate.

STATISTICS ABOUT TONNAGE.

In an address to the people of the Ohio and Mississippi valleys, John L. Vance, president of the Ohio Valley Improvement association, calls attention to the importance of the nine-foot stage of water in the river throughout the year, and gives interesting statistics as to the commerce of the great waterway. The address is in full as follows:

The Value of Statistics.

The value of the improvement of the Ohio to a nine-foot stage cannot be stated in words. Nor does it need to be stated to the merchant, the manufacturer, the farmer, the miner or the lumberman conducting his business enterprises in the valley of the Ohio or in the country tributary to it. The value of the Ohio as a highway of commerce and trade was appreciated by Washington when he urged the Virginia house of delegates to awaken to the vast importance of the Ohio and to the means to secure the rich and fast developing trade of the Ohio valley. He insisted that it could be captured by Virginia by way of his projected canal, connecting the headwaters of the Ohio with the Virginia rivers, utilizing the creek as part of the chain of waterways which would enhance the trade and commerce of Virginia and divert from the Pennsylvania much of the trade they were enjoying because of their command of the Allegheny, the Monongahela and the Ohio.

Seen by Franklin.

Franklin also saw and appreciated the enormous resources of the Ohio valley. While acting as the agent of the colonies in England, prior to the war of the revolution, he strongly urged the English to seek the Ohio valley because of its wealth in mine, field and forest, the adaptability of the soil to farming and to the raising of tobacco, its richness in iron and in coal and timber. He also demonstrated in his pamphlet that merchandise, agricultural products and ores could be transported to England by way of the long voyage down the Ohio and the Mississippi to Liverpool cheaper than the Pennsylvania canal could carry the same amount of freight across the mountains to Philadelphia, to say nothing of the cost of ocean transportation.

Congressman Randall's Views.

In his comprehensive address before the executive committee of the national rivers and harbors congress and the civic, commercial and manufacturing and financial organizations at St. Louis last May, Congressman Randall, of Louisiana, made this statement and fortified it by official statistics, remarking as it is:

"The commerce of Pittsburgh last year was 103,000,000 tons, the largest in the country. Of this 50,000,000 tons were transported by water 1,000 miles at a cost of eighty (80) cents per ton, and 135 miles by railway, at a cost of ninety (90) cents per ton. Iron ore is brought up the Great Lakes 1,000 miles for eighty (80) cents per ton, and to carry it 135 miles remaining by rail costs ninety (90) cents per ton. Coal is carried for thirty-five (35) cents per ton for the water route, and costs ninety (90) cents per ton for the rail portion. Water transportation, under well-governed conditions, averages six times cheaper than rail."

But, to bring about the most desired of all consummations—a permanently navigable Ohio from Pittsburgh to Cairo, all interests in the Ohio valley must be ready to fortify the desire with facts. United States army, stanch friends of the great work, has made a request for statistics of the tonnage of the Ohio river for the purpose of illustrating the enormous advantages certain to come from the improvement of the Ohio to the interests of the valley in the first instance and to the interest of the entire country ultimately.

For Producer and Consumer.
The request is not only earnest and important, but is pregnant with the greatest results of good to each and every interest in the Ohio valley from Pittsburgh to Cairo—producer as well as consumer. There should be no hesitation on the part of any interest in complying with the request.

Son of King is Buried in Boston; Mother Was Beauty of Lowly Origin.

To most people Copp's Hill burial ground, in Yankee Boston, would seem an unlikely spot to be the last resting place for the son of an European king, says a Boston dispatch to the Chicago Inter-Ocean. Inprobable it might seem, but still it is the actual fact that a son of Christian VII, king of Denmark, is buried in Copp's Hill cemetery. He lies in tomb No. 18, not far from the Hull street gate. On the records of the cemetery his name appears simply as Charles Frederick Anderson, the date of death January 28, 1846; his age thirty-eight, and the cause of death, "accidental." This man lived for many years in Boston, and died here successfully his trade of ship-chandler. He had come here from Denmark and had married Mary Jane Langdon, the daughter of an old and honored Boston family. With his wife he had lived in the old Langdon home on Fleet street, close to Hanover street. He appears to have been as plain and unassuming as the ordinary American citizens round about him. Few of those who met and knew him in the ordinary relations of business or society realized that in his veiled blood the blood of one of the oldest and proudest royal houses in Europe. Such was the fact, nevertheless. His ancestors had ruled over Denmark since the middle ages. He himself is remembered as a remarkably handsome man, tall, straight as one of the pines of his native northland; skin fair as a girl's, with blue eyes and light curly hair, he looked as imagination pictures his Viking ancestors must have looked when the sight of their prowess was familiar to Europe and far off Iceland. He was royal in his appearance, and he bore the royal names of Denmark. For centuries the kings of that country had been Christians or Fredericks. In his own land both names had been his. In America he had changed the Danish Christian into its English equivalent Charles. His mother had sprung from an humble origin among the common people, that is why this handsome Dane was a ship-chandler in a foreign land instead of consorting with princes and nobles with royalty in his own country.

Object of Lincoln Farm Association.

This is a patriotic association of the citizens of the United States, formed to develop the Lincoln birthplace farm at Hodgenville, Kentucky, into a permanent Lincoln National park—a park of patriotism. When finished the park will be the finest historical memorial in the country, and will stand forever as a source of pride to the state of Kentucky and the entire nation. In order that this park may be the work of the whole people, the funds to complete it are to be subscribed only in small sums, from 25 cents to $25.—every subscriber becoming an honorary member, and his or her name to be entered in the permanent catalogue to be kept in a place of honor at the park. An honorary certificate will be issued to every subscriber, and no further dues of any kind will ever be required or collected.

EXCURSIONISTS

Come From St. Louis and Spend Sunday in Paducah.

An excursion train, six coaches and one baggage car, arrived from St. Louis Sunday morning at 8 o'clock bringing about 250 visitors into the city. Half were colored. The train stopped at Eleventh street and Broadway and discharged most of the passengers. It started back at 5:30 o'clock in the afternoon. The train started from St. Louis at 11:30 Saturday night. No disorder was reported and the crowd was orderly while in the city. Chief of Police James Collins had the water barrels out again and kept them filled with ice water. The free ice water has proven a popular feature and not only visitors but the general public patronizes the barrels.

Bids for Garbage Contract.

In accordance with a resolution passed by the city council of the city of Paducah and approved by the mayor July 12th, 1906, the undersigned have been appointed a committee to receive bids for the collection and delivery at the garbage dump, foot of I. C. incline, during the months of August and September of all garbage and refuse matter of any kind, all such work to be done under the general supervision and control of the board of health and in accordance with the above mentioned resolution.

THE FORGER.

Microfama of Highest Order Will Prevail at Casino This Week.

"The Forger," one of the strongest melodramas on the boards, and the heaviest bill of the season, will be put on this week by the Casino company at Wallace park. There was no change of bill after Monday last week, and, consequently, the company had the first full week's rehearsal. With the changes made in the cast a few weeks ago the company is in better shape than ever to produce this class of plays.

Case Is Continued.

The case of the Home of the Friendless against Mrs. J. H. Ross, to construe the juvenile court law and decide if the daughter of the defendant is a dependent, was this morning continued by agreement until Monday. The girl's mother wants to take her out of the Home. The officers of the Home want the mother to show she can properly care for the girl.

Horn to Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Hundesman, 505 South Tenth street, a nine-pound boy.

People and Pleasant Events

Parties pending in accounts of social entertainments will please sign them, as The Sun will not publish communications sent in that are not signed.

Pleasant Affairs.

In honor of the Misses Perryman, who are visiting in the city, the Misses Richardson entertained at their home on South Third street Saturday evening. It was intended to have a lawn party, but owing to the inclemency of the weather, the guests were confined to the house. "Progressive Conversation" was an enjoyable feature of the evening and dainty refreshments were served. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Willstach, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Walton, Misses Ella Wilhelm, Elizabeth Atkins, Irene Card, Henrich and Lucille Perryman, Floyd Swirt and Messrs. Frank Cheek, Will Bell, Oswald Cheek, Ed Card, Mel Byrd, Grover Harris, Ed Rogers and Durward Sutton.

HOUSES ENTERED WHILE YOU WAIT

Twenty Minutes Suffices For These Men.

Residence of Taylor Overstreet Is Looted and Revolvers and Money Taken.

TAKES PLACE IN DAYLIGHT.

Twenty minutes and in broad daylight sufficed to complete a job of house-breaking, and the feat was accomplished Sunday afternoon about 3 o'clock at the residence of Taylor Overstreet, Thirteenth and Jackson streets. It was done while neighbors sat on their front porches and fanned themselves to keep cool. Not the least sound of a disturbance was heard and the job was completed in the time it required Mrs. Overstreet to cross the street and hold a fifteen minute conversation with a neighbor.

Two revolvers and $5 was the net profit of the burglars' expedition. Mr. Overstreet works for the Johnson-Decker Coal company and was away from home yesterday afternoon. His wife left the house at 3 o'clock to pay a short call on a neighbor across the street. She was gone no longer than twenty minutes, she declares, yet when she returned and entered her residence, she found everything in confusion.

Dresser drawers were standing open and the contents were strewn all over the floor. Every article of furniture in the house had been tampered with. An inventory showed that two revolvers and $5 in cash were secured. No clue to the thieves was left.

TIME ENOUGH

PISTOL TOLER WILL HAVE 30 DAYS TO THINK IT OVER.

Alfred Hale Asks for More Time and Gets It All in a Lump—Other Cases.

"I am going to stop this habit of pistol toting," Police Judge E. H. Puryear declared this morning as he penned off $50 and costs and 30 days in jail against Alfred Hale, colored. Hale had been given several opportunities to prove his innocence, and this morning the patience of the court was taxed to its utmost when Hale wanted more time.

"I will give you all the time you want," the court declared as he penned off the entry.

"Will thirty days in jail be time enough?" and with this he waved Hale to the prisoners' bench.

John Barker, white, Alpha Wiley, colored, charged with the sale of malt beverages without a license were dismissed.

Other cases: Jim Robinson, Pete Caldwell, Dick Hill and Gus Williams, colored, vagrancy, left open; Jim Mason, breach of peace, left open; Robert Newton, Jesse McIntire, L. B. Spain, white, horse trading without a license, dismissed latter two, continued former; Butler Fonteneau, breach of peace, fled away; Kate Beasley, colored, drunk and disorderly, $25 and costs; Lawson McCorkell, colored, for resisting Officer Thad Terrell at the depot, $50 and costs. He struck the officer when arrested.

Charles McGill, Allen Morton, colored, breach of peace, left open; William Morgan, malicious shooting, left open.

COMPANIES RACE.

Both Are Trying to Secure Right of Way.

There is a lively fight on between the Louisville and the Cumberland Telephone companies over the acquisition of the right of way over the Louisville and Metropolis road. The latter company recently made a contract to go in and secure local connections with the Louisville company and since that it has been to the interest of the Louisville company to increase its service. The Cumberland people lack but three miles to this road of having a perfect loop around the west end of the state and both companies are not after Sheriff John Ogilvie for a right of way over his property. He is the only property owner the Louisville company has not secured permission from.

In the Bishop's Carriage

By MIRIAM NICHOLSON

Copyright, 1924, by The Babbs-Merrill Co.

"You've read it—you remember it?" "Oh, I know it by heart—my part of it. You see, he wouldn't keep away from me while he was thinking of it. He kept consulting me about everything in it. In a way, we worked over it together."

"The little man looked at me, slowly closing one eye. It is a habit of his when he's going to do something particularly nasty."

"Then, in a way, as you say, it is part of you."

"Hardly! Imagine Nance Olden writing a line of a play!"

"Still you—collaborated; that's the word. . . . I say, my dear, if I could read that comedy, and find what you say it is, I might—I don't promise, mind—but I might let you have the part that was written for you and put the thing on. Has he drilled you any, eh?"

"He was the best stage manager we ever had before he got the notion of managing for himself—and ruining himself."

"Well, he's all that yet. Of course, he has told me, and we agreed how the thing should be done. As he'd write, you know, he'd read the thing over to us, and I—"

"Fine—fine! A reading from that fool Obermuller would be enough to open the eyes of a clever woman. I'd like to read that comedy—yes."

"But Obermuller would never—"

"What?"

"He's the plot to my secretary, Mason. In there, he nudged his head toward the inner room. 'She could give him the plot and as much of her own part in full as she could remember. You know Mason. I've had to be a newspaper man. Smart fellow, that, when he's sober. He could piece out the holes—yes?'"

"I looked at him. The little beast sat there, slowly closing one eye and opening it again. He looked like an unhealthy little frog, with his bald head, his thin-lipped mouth that laughed, while the wrinkles creased away from his cold, sneering eyes that had no smile in them."

"I—I wouldn't like to make an enemy of a man like Obermuller, Mr. Tausig."

"Huh! Ain't I told you he's on the toehold?"

"But you never can tell with a man like that. Suppose he got into that combine with Hoffmeyer and Dixon and Weinstein?"

"What're you talking about?"

"Well, it's what I've heard."

"But Hoffmeyer and Dixon and Weinstein are all in with us; who told you that fairy story?"

"Obermuller himself."

The little fellow laughed. His is a crowsy, almost silent little laugh; it is a spider could laugh he'd laugh that way.

"They're fooling him a bunch or two. Never you mind Obermuller. He's a dead one."

"Oh, he said that you thought they were in with you, but that nothing but a written agreement would hold men like that. And that you hadn't got."

"Smart fellow, that Obermuller. He'd been a good man to have in the business if it hadn't been for those independent ideas he's got. He's right; it takes—"

"So there is an agreement?" I shouted, in spite of myself, as I leaned forward.

"He sat back in his chair, or rather, he let it swallow him again."

"What business is that of yours? Stick to the business on hand, tie to work on that play with Mason inside. If it's good, and we decide to put it on, we'll pay you $500 down in addition to your salary. If it's rot, you'll have your salary weekly all the time you're at it, just the same as if you were working, till I can place you. In the meantime, keep your ears and eyes open and watch things, and your mouth shut. I'll speak to Mason and he'll be ready for you to-morrow morning. Come round in the morning; there's nobody about then, and we want to keep this thing dark till it's done. Obermuller mustn't get any idea what we're up to. . . . He doesn't love you—no for shaking him?"

"He's furious; wouldn't even say good-by. I'm done for with him, anyway, I guess. But what could I do?"

"Nothing, my dear; nothing. You're a smart little girl," he chuckled. "Ta-ta!"

CHAPTER XIII.

JUST what I'd been hoping for I don't know, but I knew that my chance had come that morning.

For a week I had been talking Obermuller's comedy to Mason, the secretary. In the evenings I stood about in the wings and watched the Van Twiller company in fragments. There was one fat role in it that I just ached for, but I lost all that ache and found another, when I overheard two of the women talking about Obermuller and me one night.

"He found her and made her," one of 'em said; "just dug her out of the ground. See what he's done for her; taught her every blessed thing she knows; wrote her minuetting monologues for her; gave her her chance, and—now—Well, Tausig don't pay salaries for nothing, and she gets here as regularly as I draw mine. What more I don't know. But she hasn't set foot on the stage yet under Tausig, and they say Obermuller—"

It hasn't been a very happy week for me, I can tell you, Maggie. But I forgot it all, every shiver and ache of it,

YES, THERE IT WAS

when I came into the office that morning, as usual, and found Mason alone.

Not altogether alone—he had his bottle. And he had had it and others of the same family all the night before. The poor drunken wretch hadn't been home at all. He was worse than he'd been that morning three days before, when I had stood facing him and talking to him, while with my hands behind my back I was taking a wax impression of the lock of the desk; and he was unconscious of it all as Tausig himself.

The last page I had dictated the day before, which he'd been transcribing from his notes, lay in front of him; the gas was still burning brightly above him, and a shade he wore over his weak eyes had been knocked awry as his poor old bald head went bumping down on the type-writer before him!

The thing that favored me was Tausig's distrust of everybody connected with him. He hates his partners only a bit less than he hates the men outside the trust. The bigger and richer the syndicate grows, the more power and prosperity it has, the more he begrudges them their share of it; the more he wants it all for himself. He is madly suspicious of his clerks, and hires others to watch them, to spy upon them. He is continually moving his valuables from place to place, partly because he trusts no man, partly because he's so heartily afraid his right hand will find out what his left is doing. He is a full partner of Braun and Lowenthal—with mental reservations. He has no confidence in either of them. Half his schemes he keeps from them; the other half he tells them—part of it. He's forever afraid that the syndicate of which he's the head will fall to pieces and become another syndicate of which he won't be head.

It all makes him an unhappy, restless little beast; but it helped me today. He'd been any question of safe combinations and tangled things like that, the game would have been all up for Nancy O. But in his official safe Tausig keeps only such papers as he wants Braun and Lowenthal to see. And in his private desk in his private office he keeps—

I stole past Mason, sleeping with his forehead on the typewriter keys—he'll be lettered like the oldiekin when he wakes up—and crept into the next room to see just what Tausig keeps in that private desk of his.

Oh, yes, it was locked. But hadn't I been carrying the key to it every minute for the last 48 hours? There must be a nib of stuff in that desk of Tausig's, Mag. The touch of every paper in it is slimy with some dirty trick, some bad secret, some mean action. It's a pity that I hadn't time to go through 'em all; it would have been interesting; but under a bundle of women's letters, which that old fox keeps for no good reason, I'll bet, I lit on a paper that made my heart go bumping like a cart over cobbles.

Yes, there it was, just as Obermuller had vowed it was, with Tausig's cramped little signature followed by Hoffmeyer's, Dixon's and Weinstein's; a scheme to crush the business life out of me by the cleverest, up-to-date trust device; a thing that our Uncle Sammy just won't stand for.

And neither will Nancy Olden, Miss Monahan.

She grabbed that precious paper with a gasp of delight and closed the desk. But she bungled a bit there, for Mason lifted his head and blinked dazedly at her for a moment, recognized her and shook his head.

"No—work today," he said.

"No—I know. I'll just look over what we've done, Mr. Mason," she answered, cheerfully.

His poor head went down again with a bob, and she caught up the typewritten sheets of Obermuller's play. She waited a minute longer; half because she wanted to make sure Mason was asleep again before she tore the sheets across and crammed them down into the waste basket; half because she pitied the old fellow and was sorry to take advantage of his condition. But she knew a cure for this last sorry—a way she'd help him later; and when she danced out into the hall she was the very happiest burglar in a world chock full of opportunities.

Oh, she was in such a twitter as she did it! All that old delight in doing somebody else up, a vague knowledge of how mean she didn't know, was as nothing to the joy of doing Tausig up. She was dancing on a volcano again, that incorrigible Nance! Oh, but such a volcano, Maggie! It rumbled for a year of days when there was nothing doing; no excitement, no risk, nothing to keep a girl interested and alive.

And, Maggie, darling, it was a wonderful volcano, that one, that last one, for it worked both ways. It paid up for what I haven't done this past year and what I'll never do again in the years to come. It made up to me for all I've missed and all I'm going to miss. It was a reward of merit for not being respectable, and a preventive of further sins. Oh, it was such a volcano as never was. It was a drink and a blue ribbon in one. It was a bang-up end and a bully beginning. It was—

It was Tausig coming in as I was going out. Suddenly I realized that, but it was in such a mad whirl of excitement that I almost ran over the little fellow before I could stop myself.

"Pshaw! What a whirlwind you are!" he cried. "Where are you going?"

"Oh, good morning, Mr. Tausig," I said, sweetly. "I never dreamed you'd be down so early in the morning."

"What're you doing with the paper?" he demanded, suspiciously.

My eye followed him. I could have beaten Nancy Olden in that minute for not having sense enough to hide that precious agreement, instead of carrying it rolled up in her hand.

"Just taking it home to go over it," I said, carelessly, trying to pass him. But he barred my way.

"Where's Mason?" he asked.

"Poor Mason!" I said. "He's—he's asleep."

"Drunk again?"

I nodded. How to get away! "That settles his hash. Out he goes to-day. . . . It seems to me you're in a deuce of a hurry," he added, as I tried to get out again. "Come in; I want to talk something over with you."

"Not this morning," I said, sweetly. I wanted to cry. "I've got an engagement to lunch, and I want to go over this stuff for Mason before one."

"Him! An engagement. Who with, now?"

My chin shot up in the air. He laughed, that cold, noiseless little laugh of his.

"But suppose I want you to come to lunch with me?"

"Oh, thank you, Mr. Tausig. But how could I break my engagement with—"

"With Braun?"

"How did you guess it?" I laughed. "There's no keeping anything from you."

He was immensely satisfied with his little self. "I know him—that old rascal," he said, slowly. "I say, Olden, just do break that engagement with Braun."

"I oughtn't to—really."

"But do—oh? Finish your work here and we'll go off together, us two, at 12:30, and leave him cooling his heels here when he comes." He rubbed his hands gleefully.

"But I'm not dressed."

"You'll do for me."

"But not for me. Listen; let me hurry home now and I'll throw Braun over and be back here to meet you at 12:30."

He pursed up his thin little lips and shook his head. But I slipped past him in that minute and got out into the street.

"At 12:30," I called back as I hurried off.

I got round the corner in a jiffy. Oh, I could hardly walk, Mag! I wanted to fly and dance and skip. I wanted to kick up my heels as the children were doing in the square, while the organ ground out: "Ain't it a Shame?"

I actually did a step or two with them, to their delight, and the first thing I knew I felt a bit of a hand in mine like a cool pink snowflake and—

Oh, a baby, Mag! A girl-baby more than a year old and less than two years young; too little to talk; too big to not walk; facing the world with a winning smile and jabbering things in her soft little lingo, knowing that every woman she meets will understand.

I did, all right. She was saying to me as she kicked out her soft, hellish little foot:

"Nancy Olden, I choose you. Nancy Olden, I love you. Nancy Olden, I dare you not to love me. Nancy Olden, I defy you not to laugh back at me!"

Where in the world she dropped from, heaven knows. The organ grinded or picked up the shafts of his woe and trundled it away. The plectanion melted like magic. But that gay little flirt, about a year and a half old, just held out to my finger and gabbled—poetry.

I didn't realize just then that she was a lost, strayed or stolen. I expected every moment some nurse or conciliated mamma to appear and drag her away from me. And I looked down at her—she was just a little hunch of soft stuff; her face was a giggling dimple, framed in a big round halo, that had fallen from her chicken-boned head; and her white dress, with the blue ribbons at the shoulders, was just a little bit dirty. I like 'em a little bit dirty. Why? Perhaps because I can imagine having a little coquette of my own a bit dirty like that, and can't just see Nancy Olden with a sleek-and-shiny clean baby, all feathers and lace, like a bored little grown-up.

"You're a mouse," I gurgled down at her. "You're a sweetheart. You're a—"

And suddenly I heard a cry and a rush behind me.

It was a false alarm; just a long-legged girl of 12 rushing round the corner, followed by a lot of others. It hadn't been meant for me, of course, but in the second when I had remembered that precious paper and Tausig's rage when he should miss it, I had pulled my hand away from that bit baby's and started to run.

The poor little tot! There isn't any reason in the world for the fancies they take any more than for our own; eh, Mag? Why should she have been attracted to me just because I was so undignified as to dance with the plectanion?

But do you know what that little thing did? She thought I was playing with her. She gave a crow of delight and came bounding after me.

That finished me. I stooped and picked her up in my arms, throwing her up in the air to hear her crow and feel her come down again.

NEWS OF KENTUCKY

Shot and Killed.

Somersett, Ky., July 23.—In a fight here this afternoon between Marshall Wilder and Mack Woods, colored, near the city light plant, Wilder was shot and instantly killed and Woods fatally shot.

Bigamy Charge.

Elizabethtown, Ky., July 23.—Alvath Keith was incarcerated in jail yesterday on the charge of bigamy, being unable to furnish sureties to a $200 bond. Keith, about five years ago, married a Miss Smith, of Breckinridge county. The couple afterwards separated. Two years ago Keith married Miss Lula Martin, of Versailles, this county. His first wife in Breckinridge county also married in Mr. Vitline of that county about the same time. The plea set up by Keith is that he thought he had a divorce from wife No. 1 when he married wife No. 2. He also claims that his first wife was of the same impression.

To Arrange Opening.

Frankfort, Ky., July 23.—State Superintendent Fuqua today called a meeting of the state boards of regents for Kentucky Normal schools, to be held here on Tuesday of next week, for the purpose of taking steps to open the schools early in the fall. Treasurer H. E. Turley, of the eastern board, called at the department of State Auditor Hager today and secured a warrant for the $5,000 due for equipment of the Eastern school, located at Richmond. J. Whit Potter, treasurer for the western board, will arrive here Monday for the same purpose.

Adjudged Bankrupt.

Cadiz, Ky., July 23.—C. H. Hawkins, one of the most prominent citizens of this place, who recently filed a petition in bankruptcy, has been adjudged a bankrupt. His liabilities are about $12,000, while his assets figure up something near $21,000. Judge Robert Crenshaw has been appointed trustee in the case.

Stop Elopement.

Hopkinsville, Ky., July 23.—Mrs. R. M. Ferguson, of Madisonville, telephoned this afternoon to the police to arrest her son, aged 18 who was on the 3:18 P. M. and N. train en route to Springfield, Tenn., with his sweetheart, Miss Linn, aged 16. The couple surrendered gracefully to the officers and spent the evening here visiting points of interest under the chaperonage of Patrolman Claxton. They will be taken back to Madisonville tonight.

With Winchester Rifle.

Fulton, Ky., July 23.—A sensation was created on the streets of Fulton when Gus McFall, a prominent citizen of this place, came marching down Lake street with a rifle at shoulder and two negroes whom he had caught at his house, with arms upheld, lined up in front of him. After compelling them to go in the jail door and allow the jailer to lock them up he went to the police judge and preferred a charge of burglary against them. He says he caught them at his home in the act of thievery.

Minister Takes Landman.

Henderson, Ky., July 23.—Rev. J. C. Chappel, a Baptist minister, residing in Audubon, attempting suicide today by taking landman. He was found at home in a dying condition, but physicians saved his life after four hours of hard work. Domestic troubles are assigned for the deed.

Stock Running at Large.

Fulton, Ky., July 23.—Pillions are being circulated in various parts of Carlisle county asking that an election be held to decide whether or not stock is to be allowed to run at large in that county. The matter will be settled at the August term of the county court.

Elevator Boy Is Killed.

Henderson, Ky., July 23.—John Davis, no elevator boy employed in the Ohio Valley Banking and Trust company building, was accidentally killed this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock having been caught by the up-going cage as he entered it. His head was crushed off and his body was badly mangled. The victim was 22 years of age and the son of Adolphus Davis, a liverrman.

Train Dispatcher Arrested.

Louisville, Ky., July 23.—J. M. Scott, chief train dispatcher of the Louisville and Nashville railroad, with headquarters in this city, was arrested today by a deputy United States marshal charged with violating Section 10 of the Act of June, 1893.

The affidavit upon which the warrant for his arrest was based was made by H. B. Perkins, president of the Order of Railway Telegraphers. He states that Edwin L. Rowe, a telegraph operator was dismissed by Scott in April, 1904, because of his affiliation with the Order of Railway Telegraphers. He makes further affidavit to the effect that in April, 1901, Scott discharged another telegraph operator named V. Poyner, of Princeton, Ky. because the latter was a member of the Telegraphers' union.

Scott was released on bond of $200 to appear before United States Commissioner Cassin next Saturday for preliminary hearing.

Had His Name Changed. Owensboro, Ky., July 23.—Dr. Nathan Krasnowetz, the rabbi of the Jewish Temple Adath Israel, has had his name changed from Krasnowetz to Krass. The change was made today in the Davless county court on petition of the rabbi. Dr. Krass is one of the most popular and best-known Jewish ministers in the state, and the step came as a surprise to many. In his petition he stated that he desired the name changed so that his name would be shortened and simplified.

The West Kentucky Coal company and others against steamer Mary M. Michael.

Whereas libels were filed in the district court of the United States, for the western district of Kentucky, at Paducah, on the 21st and 22nd days of June, 1906 by the West Kentucky Coal company, and Mississippi Valley Marine Railway and Dock company against the steamer Mary M. Michael, her engine, tackle, apparel and owners, alleging in substance that said steamer Michael was indebted to them in the sum aggregating $1,609.28 for fuel repairs, etc., and that same has never been paid, and prays process against said steamer Mary M. Michael and the same may be condemned and sold to pay said claims, with cost and expenses.

LAWS IN JEOPARDY

NOT SIGNED BY SPEAKERS IN OPEN SESSION.

Constitutional Question of Moment Pending Before Tennessee's Supreme Court.

Nashville, Tenn., July 23.—Should the supreme court of Tennessee sustain intimations and rulings made years ago, and decide that the provisions of the constitution requiring that "no bill shall become a law until it shall have been signed by the respective speakers in open session, the fact of such signing to be noted on the Journal," is mandatory, the effect will be far reaching.

An investigation which has been quietly pursued here developed the fact that about 200 of the laws passed since 1871 are lacking in the signatures of one or both speakers, and one of them lacks not only the signatures of the speakers, but also of the governor. Many of the laws are of great importance and probably millions of dollars are involved by the defect which it is claimed is a fatal one, according to the decisions of the supreme court. If these laws are held to be void, the map of Tennessee will have to be withdrawn as to county lines; some towns which by legislative enactment were wiped off the map will have to be placed back again and some others in turn wiped out.

Model City of World at Washington According to Plans Now Considered

When Pierre L'Enfant, George Washington and Thomas Jefferson put their heads together to devise a plan for the future capital of the United States, two courses were open to them. They might have provided for the needs of their own time, in which case we should have had a neat, compact little town, which would have made a favorable impression on visitors for half a century, and then have ripped out at the seams like a baby's coat on a man. Or they could look forward with the eye of faith to the requirements of future ages, making designs which they would never see executed, accepting the inconvenience of living in a palace in the clouds, and submitting to the ridicule of smart critics who refused to take visions for realities. That was what they did. Spurred on by Washington and Jefferson, L'Enfant laid out the capital of a nation which had fewer people than the state of Ohio has now, on a scale unmatched by any city then two generations the contrast between the magnificent theory and the shabby reality of Washington was an inexhaustible spring of humor.

By the end of the nineteenth century Washington had grown to such an extent that its "magnificent distances" were no longer ridiculous, and the plain man's eye could see some of the things it had taken the eye of genius to see a hundred years before. In 1898 it occurred to the residents there that it would soon be time to celebrate the hundredth birthday of the capital, and the celebration was held in December, 1900. The speeches on this occasion dwelt upon the need for the improvement of the District of Columbia upon harmonious and adequate lines. The American Institute of Architects discussed the subject at the same time, and upon its initiative the senate committee on the District of Columbia invited Mr. Daniel H. Burnham and Mr. Frederick Law Olmstead, Jr., to act as expert advisers, with power to name others. They accepted, and secured the co-operation of Mr. Charles F. McKim and Mr. Augustus Saint-Gaudens. This completed the "Burnham commission," whose work promises to make Washington the model city of the world.

After nearly a year of study the commission decided that it could do no better than to restore and develop the original plan of L'Enfant. There was one respect, however, in which the present genius of the designer of Washington could not possibly foresee the needs of a modern city. In his day people who did not enter a place by horse-power or on foot came by water, and he made most ample plans for the water approaches to Washington. But he could not imagine a time when the great majority of the visitors to the capital would be shot in by rail and would have their first view of the place on passing through the doors of a station. He provided three great foci for his composition—the "congress house," the "president house" and the Washington monument.

For the union station Mr. Burnham has created a vast Roman palace of shining white Bethel granite, its central pavilion modeled on the arch of Constantine, and all its outlines preserving the general idea of a colossal city gate. It is about three feet wider than the capitol. Its construction is a landmark in American civic art, for it is the first example on record of a conscious and costly cooperation on the part of any of our railroads in an attempt to beautify a great city. There have been several such examples since. To ensure the building its full effect a semicircular plaza, twelve hundred by six hundred feet, has been created in front of it, with avenues radiating to half the points of the compass. Through the central of these avenues the visitor emerging from the main door of the station sees the vista of the capitol—the most imposing and appropriate of all possible introductions to the nation's seat of government.

By L'Enfant's original plan, the capitol and the Washington monument were to have been connected by a broad parkway, the Mall, flanked by shaded walks and rows of public buildings.

But between this expense of splendid possibilities and Pennsylvania avenue, the chief highway of the city, private enterprises were allowed to thrust a squalid, and in parts disreputable settlement. It is proposed by the Burnham commission to have this disfiguring wedge redeemed and devoted to buildings for municipal purposes, including a great central market. Already the first of these structures is under way—a building for the local government of the District of Columbia. Unfortunately the postoffice department is planted on one of the best sites of this quarter in a Kansas City emporium, so utterly out of keeping with the general atmosphere of official Washington that it seizes the teeth of architects on edge.

With the acquisition of another small piece of land just west of the "White Lot," back of the white house and a third between the Mall and Maryland avenue on the south, together with some blocks bordering Lafayette Square in front of the white house and some others around the capitol grounds, there would be an unbroken area two miles and two-thirds in extreme length, and a mile and a half in extreme width, all devoted to public purposes. A small part of this, such as the tracts occupied by the buildings of the George Washington University, the Vorcean art gallery and the Daughters of the American Revolution, would be held by semi-public institutions, but most of it would be the property of the government.

The capitol stands in the center of a park of nearly sixty acres. When the Burnham commission began its work this park was framed in by dingy houses or neglected lots. There was only one building there worthy of its position—the library of congress. With this as a beginning the commission proposed to surround the capitol grounds ultimately with sixteen stately public buildings, each occupying an entire block, and all having some relation with the legislative work of the government. Of these the house and senate office buildings, facing each other from opposite sides of the park, are already well under way. These classic twins, reminiscent of the ministry of marine and its mate, to which the Place de la Concorde at Paris owes so much of its distinction, have been carefully designed to harmonize with the capitol and lead the eye to it without competing with it for the attention of the spectator. As each has a frontage of 17 feet on the capitol grounds, the two together contribute 952 feet toward the completion of a fitting frame for the park. The capitol itself is 751 feet 1 inch long, and the library of congress 170 feet, so that in buildings already constructed or under way there is a superb architectural frontage of 2,173 feet, or over two-fifths of a mile, on the eastern half of the capitol grounds. A building for the supreme court is expected to fill one of the remaining spaces, and then only two large and two small sites will need to be occupied to make the framing of that part of the picture complete. We shall then have a "Place" fifty per cent larger than the Place de la Concorde, and incomparably more imposing in its general effect.

Of course in comparing this expense with the Place de la Concorde it is not meant to imply that the capitol grounds and their surroundings will be in any sense a copy of the Parisian plaza. The Place de la Concorde is a flat paved square of about twenty-two acres, all easily embraced in one view; the capitol is set on a hill in the midst of a sylvan park of sixty acres, whose beauties have to be seen on the installment plan, but perhaps will be all the more impressive on that account.—Collier's Weekly.

poetry. On Tuesday of this week it became necessary for him to issue a special dispensation for a certain wedding, and he did it thusly: "STATE OF WISCONSIN, LAFAYETTE COUNTY—SS.—In County Court.

"Of all true happiness beneath the skies,

The greatest joy in matrimony lies; Then why for five long years delay the bliss

That ever hallows the first nuptial kiss?

At any hour after this evening's sun, The within named couple may be joined as one

"By order of County Court, Lafayette, Wis., this 15th day of June, 1906.

"T. J. LAW, County Judge."

"I'm awfully busy getting ready to go away," declared Grace over the phone.

"What are you doing this morning?" asked her chum.

"Oh, I'm addressing souvenir postal cards," she said, "so they'll be all ready to mail at the different cities I'm going to visit."—Detroit Free Press.
